Haynes Boone's London office bolsters energy practice

Conrad Purcell

Law firm Haynes Boone has bolstered its London Energy, Power and Natural Resources Practice with a new partner in its New Fetter Lane office.

Conrad Purcell, who has worked across a number of major infrastructure projects, joins from the energy and utilities sector division of fellow law firm Bird & Bird.

The incoming partner, with experience in onshore and offshore wind farms, previously served as in-house lawyer for independent renewable energy company RES Group.

“Conrad has handled virtually all aspects of infrastructure projects, from the planning stages to completion, in many markets across the world,” Partner and co-chair of Haynes Boone’s Energy Practice Group Jeff Nichols said.

“His experience allows him to deftly guide clients so that they reach their strategic objectives in an efficient and commercially viable manner.”
