The federal government is afforded unique termination rights that typically flow down to subcontractors. Our firm advises on such terminations, including both terminations for convenience and default.

In the termination for convenience context, we have assisted clients in assessing whether terminations are justified and the steps to take after receiving a termination notice. We prepare and assess termination settlement proposals, as well as resolve disputes at the subcontract and prime contract levels.

In the default context, we have assisted clients in responding to and sending cure notices, resolving allegations of default, and litigating disputes. Our team has assisted in converting default terminations to terminations for convenience, as well as defended allegations of improper termination for default.
