Haynes Boone has been serving clients in the Houston office for 30 years – consistently proving its value in the local community, the U.S., and internationally. Our lawyers help leading corporate clients grow and thrive in this energetic city, which has major connections to Latin America, Europe and Asia. In fact, many transactions our team works on have an international tie. Our emphasis on cross-border deal-making is particularly relevant in a hub like Houston.

Our Houston office focuses heavily on Energy (Oil & Gas, Power and Renewable Energy), Private Equity, Technology, Real Estate, Intellectual Property, Environmental, Business Litigation, Appeals, Bankruptcy and Restructuring, Labor and Employment, Employee Benefits and Executive Compensation, Finance, Tax, Securities, Mergers and Acquisitions, and Public and International Law.

We are involved in an array of transactions and litigation work, with particular focus on the needs of the Houston business community. We embrace the city's rich diversity, we are an integral part of its growth, and we are proud to be among the largest corporate law firms in Houston in 2025.

Our office has been recognized by the Houston Bar Association as an Equal Access to Justice Champion for its continued support through the Houston Volunteer Lawyers Program. Houston lawyers are active in the community with business and nonprofit groups such the United Way, the Association of Corporate Growth, and various cultural, educational, philanthropic and religious organizations in the city. A number of lawyers in the office also serve on boards, in executive-level positions with organizations, and in leadership positions within bar and industry-related organizations.
