

Haynes and Boone in Law360: 'Justices Reject 4 Benefits Cases, Seek Input on Northwestern'

October 9, 2020 Ben Mesches, Nina Cortell, Jason Jordan

PRACTICES Litigation, Appellate

Law360 mentioned Haynes Boone in an article about the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to deny review of Fifth Circuit decision in favor of firm client the Dallas Police and Fire Pension System.

The pension system is represented by Partners Ben Mesches and Nina Cortell and Associates Kelli Bills and Jason Jordan.

Here is an excerpt:

The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to wade into a battle over benefits for Dallas first responders and turned away two other cases hinging on pension withdrawal liability, but it asked the federal government to weigh in on Northwestern University workers' push to revive a proposed class action claiming their retirement savings were mismanaged.

In addition to declining to review the Fifth Circuit's decision upholding a Texas law that prevented Dallas firefighters and police officers from collecting deferred retirement benefits, the justices on Monday turned away petitions out of the Second Circuit, Eighth Circuit and First Circuit.

To read the full article, click here. (Subscription required)