KUHF Radio in Houston featured Haynes Boone Counsel Robert Thibault in a piece about the potential implications for Texas energy companies following the upcoming ballot measure in Colorado that, if passed, could block new oil and gas drilling on a significant portion of state land.

Here is an excerpt:

Robert Thibault, a Denver attorney with the Haynes Boone law firm, says it's not just Houston oil and gas producers that would be impacted.

"You have service companies based in Houston that have significant operations here," he says. "You have financial groups, private equity groups, that have significant investments in Colorado that would be directly affected as well."
