Haynes Boone and R&D Ribitzky jointly announce on Nov. 24, 2020 that they have formed a strategic alliance to counsel companies in the digital health and precision medicine sectors.

Both firms have deep experience serving these industry sectors and have joined hands to expand the scope of services that they can provide startups and more established technology companies.

R&D Ribitzky and Haynes Boone will share best practices and strategies across a range of legal and business issues of concern to high-growth companies developing digital health and precision medicine products. As part of their new alliance, the two firms will co-produce webinars, podcasts, articles and other thought leadership that will explore cutting-edge topics and trends, spanning business and product development strategies; intellectual property, finance, regulatory and other legal issues; market data and intelligence; and case studies.

“By teaming with Haynes Boone, we can more efficiently and seamlessly provide a one-stop shop for emerging technology companies,” said Dr. Ron Ribitzky, the founder and chief executive of R&D Ribitzky.

With offices in Boston, Washington D.C., San Francisco, Paris, and Singapore, R&D Ribitzky delivers cross-functional experts who bring together clinical and business, science and technology, digital experience and product development, marketing, sales, and ecosystem partners to its clients. R&D Ribitzky partners serve private and public-sector investors, startups and enterprise teams worldwide. For more information, please visit www.rdribitzky.com.
