As a former senior in-house lawyer at one of the nation's largest public healthcare companies, Morrison has the hands-on experience to efficiently and successfully defend corporations and executives in complex healthcare matters. He represents national healthcare providers in a broad range of litigation and compliance matters involving government enforcement, internal investigation, False Claims Act cases, and antitrust counselling, among many other matters. Morrison has led teams that have handled many mission-critical matters.

In addition to his own practice, he co-heads Haynes Boone's Healthcare and Life Sciences Practice Group, helping to manage a growing team of more than two dozen lawyers nationwide who work with clients across all sectors of the healthcare industry, advising on business transactions, regulatory compliance, government investigations, patent litigation and counseling, and also a host of issues arising from the COVID-19 pandemic.
