

International Arbitration Experts Discuss Shifts in Transparency, Significant Developments this Year, What 2018 May Bring

By Andreas Dracoulis | November 30, 2017

RELATED PRACTICES Shipping Dispute Resolution, International Arbitration, Construction Litigation, Energy Litigation, Offshore Oil and Gas Dispute Resolution, Oil and Gas Litigation

Mealey's International Arbitration Report recently asked industry experts and leaders for their thoughts on changes in transparency in arbitration, the potential future impact of awards and other significant events in 2017, where the next hot seat in arbitration is expected to be and what challenges 2018 may bring.

Robert B. Davidson of JAMS in New York, Edward G. Kehoe of King & Spalding in New York, Dr. Alexandre Malan of BELOT MALAN & Associés in Paris, Andreas Dracoulis of Haynes Boone CDG in London and Dr. VeitÖhlberger of DORDA Attorneys at law in Vienna share their thoughts on these important issues.

To read the full publication, click on the PDF linked below.

International-Arbitration-Experts-Discuss-Shifts-in-Transparency.pdf