

NAFTA Renegotiation Monitor

August 16, 2018

PRACTICES Mexico, Canada, Mexico Energy Reform, International

For more than two decades, the United States, Mexico and Canada have adhered to the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). As these countries' governments engage in a contentious renegotiation, it is imperative for businesses in all three countries to stay abreast of the process and of the impact of any changes to NAFTA.

As a service to stakeholders across all of the key industries impacted by NAFTA, Haynes Boone has created the NAFTA Renegotiation Monitor, a comprehensive, up-to-date overview of the most important trade issues at stake in ongoing discussions, including a breakdown of where the talks stand in more than 30 areas. We will update our report periodically to reflect the latest developments and topics of interest.

View the NAFTA Renegotiation Monitor report.

View the Spanish version of the NAFTA Renegotiation Monitor report.