

COVID-19 Webinar: What now? How the Supreme Court's vaccination decision affects workplace safety during the peak of the Omicron variant

January 25, 2022 Mini Kapoor, Jason Habinsky, Henson Adams, Matthew Deffebach

PRACTICES OSHA, Labor and Employment

Just as the rise of the COVID-19 Omicron variant has caused employers to once again reassess safety measures, the Supreme Court issued its opinion on OSHA's vaccination mandate. Haynes Boone is pleased to present a complimentary webinar to help employers navigate the current landscape of workplace safety following the Supreme Court's opinion, including: Presentation topics include:

- How the Supreme Court's decision does not change an employer's obligations to protect employees against COVID-19 in the workplace
- How do industry and regional specific directives continue to regulate pandemic safety
- What are the additional requirements regarding mask mandates employers must know
- May an employer treat unvaccinated employees differently and what measures may employers take to address unvaccinated employees
- What are the latest developments on medical and religious exemptions
- What is the EEOC's most recent guidance on COVID-19 as a protected disability
- How to manage employees who may be discouraging others from vaccination or mask-wearing

Watch the webinar here.