Todd Garland is an experienced government contracts attorney and litigator focusing on contract claims and disputes with the federal government. His practice involves advising clients on legal issues arising from relationships with the federal government and private partners. Todd helps clients resolve contract disputes with the federal government, bid protests, and disputes between prime contractors and subcontractors in commercial litigation. In addition to representing “traditional” government contractors, he helps non-traditional government contracting clients operating under “other transaction” agreements with the U.S. government.

Todd has an active practice representing contractors in bid protests at the Government Accountability Oce (GAO), U.S. Court of Federal Claims, agency level, and in state-level protests. He also represents contractors in size protests before the Small Business Administration (SBA), including the SBA Oce of Hearings and Appeals (OHA).

In addition to advising clients regarding protest-related issues, Todd litigates government contract claims at the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals, Civilian Board of Contract Appeals, U.S. Court of Federal Claims, and Federal Circuit. He represents clients in all types of disputes with the U.S. government, including constructive changes, default terminations, disallowance of costs, and differing site conditions.

Todd has litigated complex commercial cases in state and federal court, such as representation of a prime contractor arising from a $1 billion, 29-mile highway project, and representation of one of the world’s largest engineering companies sued in federal court for the allegedly defective design of a $15 million sewer project. His experience includes representation of a subcontractor in a $150 million dispute involving an advanced missile system used by the U.S. Air Force and Navy, and allied militaries.

He helped a prime contractor defend against a subcontractor’s action seeking $25 million in damages for breach of contract, unjust enrichment, and violation of the Virginia Business Conspiracy Statute, obtaining dismissal or summary judgment on all counts. Shee Atika Languages, LLC v. Glob. Linguist Sols., LLC, 2014 WL 3810289 (E.D. Va. Aug. 1, 2014), a'd 601 F. App'x 224 (4th Cir. 2015).

When not representing clients in bid protests or complex commercial litigation, he counsels clients regarding issues that typically arise from government contracts-related relationships, including non-compete, non-solicitation, and non-disclosure agreements, teaming agreements, and issues related to proprietary and confidential information such as trade secrets.

Todd also counsels clients regarding white collar issues involving anticorruption, the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), and civil False Claims Act (FCA).

During law school, Todd worked for a private security contractor that performs in contingency contracting environments. He is also recognized in the Virginia and Washington, D.C. Super Lawyers Rising Stars, Thomson Reuters, list in Government Contracts (2021-2022), and for inclusion in The Best Lawyers in America: Ones to Watch, Woodward/White, Inc., in Construction Law and Litigation – Construction (2022-2025).
