PRACTICES Investment Management

Arie Heijkoop is a partner in the Investment Management Practice Group in Haynes Boone's Washington, D.C. office.

His practice focuses on advising asset managers and fund sponsors, registered funds, and trusts, and independent directors on various legal, transactional, and compliance matters. He regularly advises fund management on a range of operational activities, including the formation, operation, merger, and liquidations of open- and closed-end mutual funds, ETFs, variable insurance products and business development companies. He has been involved in numerous new product launches, such as volatility managed variable products, liquid alternative strategies, ESG products, and thematic exchange-traded fund products.

Arie's experience includes representing open-end registered funds and their board members in the financial services industry about routine and non-routine issues, such as new and ongoing compliance matters, disclosure issues, reorganizations of funds and investment advisers, engagement with the Securities Exchange Commission and other regulators. He also advises closed-end fund managers and their independent directors on offerings, proxies, tender offers, investor interactions, and co-investment transactions.
