RELATED PRACTICES Commercial Real Estate Leasing, Real Estate

Nathan Kemp is an associate in the Real Estate Practice Group at Haynes Boone's Dallas office. Nathan Kemp focuses his practice on commercial real estate transactions and development. Nathan's practice focuses on transactional commercial real estate, representing clients locally and nationally in matters involving acquisitions, dispositions, leasing, development, and financing. His work spans a range of property types, including office, industrial, retail, raw land, and single-building assets, with experience supporting transactions through multiple stages of a property's life cycle.

Nathan represents both landlords and tenants in leasing matters and advises clients pursuing real estate purchases, sales, and development projects. He approaches each matter with attention to the client's business objectives, practical risk management, and the broader commercial considerations that shape a successful transaction.

Known for a responsive and relationship-driven approach, Nathan is committed to clear communication, trust, and helping clients move forward with confidence. His background in economics and tax consulting informs the practical perspective he brings to real estate matters, allowing him to support clients with both legal judgment and an understanding of the business context behind each deal.
