Marco Alán Rico is an associate in the International Transactions Practice Group at Haynes Boone's Mexico City office. His practice focuses on federal tax advice, wealth and estate planning, and the tax aspects of corporate transactions.

Marco advises clients on wealth and succession planning, with a focus on corporate structures and real estate investment vehicles. He also takes part in the analysis and implementation of tax strategies for mergers, acquisitions and cross-border corporate restructurings and transactions. In matters with international elements, he advises on the application of treaties for the avoidance of double taxation.

Marco's background in law and accounting enables him to deliver comprehensive solutions for corporate transactions and strategic planning. He leverages his prior experience at one of Mexico's leading tax firms in tax strategy, corporate governance, and risk management to support clients in achieving their business objectives. His thesis addressed the tax treatment of yield farming in Mexico.
