PRACTICES Intellectual Property, Patent Prosecution and Counseling

Jay Yin is a counsel in the Intellectual Property Practice Group in the Dallas - North office of Haynes Boone. His practice focuses on preparing and prosecuting patent applications.

Jay has a B.S. degree in chemical engineering and an M.S. degree in material science. Before going to law school, Jay served as an engineering group leader in a flexible thin film display company where he led the efforts to develop and manufacture organic pigment particles and dyes and to optimize the chemical processes associated with the bench-scale production of the particles and dyes.

Prior to joining Haynes Boone, Jay was in-house counsel to two major thin film transistor liquid crystal display (TFT-LCD) makers in Taiwan separately, where he reviewed claim charts, drafted proposed claim constructions, and negotiated patent license agreements.

Jay's areas of technical experience include Semiconductor fabrication processes, TFT-LCD fabrication processes, Capacitors, and Phase separation and inversion of polyurethane (PU).
